Hodgson garners 63% of votes

■ MPP wins
all but two of 241 polls in expanded riding

MARTHA PERKINS

Editor

The overwhelming support shown to the Progressive Conservatives shows the people of Haliburton-Victoria-Brock voted for something, rather than against, says a grateful Chris Hodgson, who once again will be representing the riding at Queen's Park.

"I'm really overwhelmed that people chose to be positive," he said at Thursday night's victory celebration at the Olympia restaurant in downtown Lindsay. "It sends a positive signal people are voting for something."

More than 63% of voters, or 31,175 people, put their X beside Hodgson's name, with Liberal Sharon McCrae rarely tallying even half the number of votes he did.

The veteran Liberal candidate, however, did double the number of her supporters compared to the previous election. On Thursday, 13,964 people voted for her, compared to 6,207 in 1995.

NDP Rick Denyer was a distant third, coming in with 3,629 votes compared to the NDP's 1995 tally of 4,4126.

Three other candidates - independent Brad Bradamore, Charles Olito of the Freedom Party and Maxim Newby of the Natural Law Party - barely registered on the tally, with 329, 152 and 196 votes respectively.

Of the 241 polls in the newly expanded riding, Hodgson handily won all but two. One he lost was in Snowdon, with 28 votes compared to McCrae's 38, and the other was in Lindsay. In the previous election, he won all polls and garnered 68% of the votes.

THREE IN A ROW:

Joined by his wife Marie and mother Barb, Chris Hodgson celebrates winning his third mandate as MPP for Haliburton-Victoria-Brock at Thursday night's victory party at the Olympia restaurant in Lindsay. The Haliburton native's popularity exceeded that of his party, which garnered 45% of the vote compared to Hodgson's 63%.

Saws fall silent:

Cutting ends suddenly at Woodland Ranch

PETER DOWNS

Staff Reporter

The high-pitched whine of saws has died out at Woodland Ranch after eight straight months of dawn 'til dusk cutting.

Heavy logging at the 4,800-acre property in the centre of the Highlands came to an abrupt halt less than two weeks ago.

Workers carrying out the tree cutting received lay-off notices May 28 and all of the heavy machinery used in the logging operation was removed from the site the following day.

The moves sparked suspicions among some that the owners of the property were pulling up stakes and abandoning their development proposal after cashing in on a large portion of the forest's lumber.

But that's not the case, maintains the president of the Ontario numbered company that bought the land in September.

In a phone interview from Vernon, B.C., Greg Darroch said he and his partners have finished the majority of logging intended for the property and are moving forward with plans to turn the site into a combination RV park and dude ranch.

"We've done that part of the plan," he said Thursday morning. "There may be some more select logging done but it won't be anything like what people have seen until now."

More trees will have to come down as buildings and other facilities go up, but that will be left "until the planners start deciding where to put things," Darroch said.

Land surrounding Little Soyers Lake would also have to be cleared for two proposed 18-holes golf courses.

Two weeks ago Darroch was in the Highlands to meet with Minden councillors who are concerned that so much logging has been carried out in the absence of a formal development proposal for the ranch.

Volunteering as easy as listening to music

DO YOU KNOW that volunteering can be as easy as listening to music with a new friend for a couple of hours a week? That's just one of roles for volunteers being sought by the Haliburton County Association for Community Living. Other people needed include someone to go for a walk with a gentleman one or two times a week any time between 9 a.m. and 3 p.m., someone to share going to the movies or a musical event and someone to drive an individual who lives in Minden to Haliburton in the mornings and then back to Minden in the afternoon, one or two times a week in the summer. If you think you can help, please call the association at 457-2626. Meanwhile, don't forget that the association's annual general meeting is June 15 at the Haliburton Legion starting at 7 p.m.

Oops! Incorrect information was given in last week's Pic of the Past. The 1958 photo is indeed of a barber shop, but it wasn't Buck Baker's, who was a few yards farther down the road. The shop was owned by Tom Carnochan, who previously had been in a one-storey lean to on the west side of Johnny Madill's hotel. When the hotel was torn down in the mid-1940s, the new shop, the one in the picture, was erected for Carnochan's use, and later for Bruce Sawyer, who took over in the 1960s. It stood where the driveway into IGA is. The building at the left of the photo is Dr. Louis Carroll's and at right is Rex Boice's garage, originally Curry Motors. It's believed the barber shop pole in the photo is the one on display at the Haliburton Highlands Museum. Our thanks to the sharp eyesight of Marilyn Boughner for first pointing out the mistake and to Don Johnston and Steve Hill for providing the historical information.

If the Echo staff starts fading away, we'll know who to blame (or thank.) All of us here, plus hundreds of people in Haliburton, were faithful devotees of Bins and Baskets, especially when we needed our candy fix. The store was owned by Jamie and Gord Woodman. Jamie works here at The Echo and Gord is one of Dysart's new by-law enforcement officers and Saturday was the last day the store was opened. We'd like to thank them for all their years in business and for their indulgence when it came to satisfying our sweet tooth.

Speaking of by-law enforcement, shoppers on Haliburton's main street have noticed that the parking meter by-law is once again being enforced. There's been a veritable flurry of yellow parking tickets on car windows this past week. Perhaps it's time to remind people that the meters are being checked regularly so they'd be wise to keep a stash of dimes and quarters in their car.

The support meeting for people with acquired brain injury and their caregivers is at the Haliburton Access Centre, Hwy 118 north of Haliburton, on Wednesday, June 16 from 1 to 2:30 p.m..

More than 100 vintage pleasure craft will be on display at the July 10 boat festival presented by the Antique and Classic Boat Society of Toronto. Some boats date back to the turn of the century and all are in perfectly restored condition. The show takes place in Gravenhurst. For more information call 416-923-6481.

Dean resigns as Chamber of Commerce manager

PETER DOWNS

Staff Reporter

The manager of the Haliburton Highlands Chamber of Commerce has resigned in the wake of multiple child pornography charges brought against him last month.

Brian Dean, 51, submitted a letter of resignation to the Chamber's board of directors on June 1, four days after being released on bail from Lindsay jail. Dean's resignation is retroactive to May 13, the day before he was arrested at work.

Officers with the OPP's Child Pornography Unit and Minden detachment allege Dean used computers in the Chamber's tourist information office on Hwy. 35 to download graphic images of pre-pubescent children involved in explicit sex acts.

Dean has been charged with three counts of possession of child pornography, one count of making child pornography and one count of unsafe storage of a firearm (resulting from a search of his home in Haliburton).

Dean appeared in Minden court last Tuesday but the case was bumped back to July 7.

The Chamber will now launch a search for a new full-time general manager, says board president Bryan Kernohan. The board is in the process of putting together a job description with the assistance of the Ontario Chamber of Commerce and other economic development associates.

By the time the board advertises the vacancy and carries out the necessary interviews, it will likely be nearly the end of summer before the position is filled, Kernohan estimated.

"It's open-ended to a point. From my own perspective, I would think we'd be trying to get someone by late August or early September."

In the meantime, Chamber director Ross Rigney will continue to manage the organization on an interim basis.

Rigney is reeve of Snowdon township and a member of county council. He previously served as interim CAO of the county while it searched for someone to takeover the position full-time.

Joe the Crow is no bird brain

■ Not only does orphaned bird know enough to land in the right hands when his home is destroyed, but he's also learned how to say hello

PETER DOWNS

Staff Reporter

Nearly continual feedings. Rising with the sun. Cleaning up gooey little messes around the house.

Anyone who thinks looking after a baby human is hard work should ask Haliburton's Kadwell family about raising a baby crow.

Joe the Crow, as he's been called by his rescuers, fell from his nest as a newly hatched baby about a month ago when trees were being bulldozed by a contractor.

But the tiny, down-covered orphan definitely landed in the right hands.

Kris Kadwell, who took the helpless bird under his wing, has successfully raised dozens of birds.

As a young boy growing up in Mississauga, the father of two used to work with bird experts Roy Ivor and Bernice Inman Emery at the Winding Lane Bird Sanctuary.

From the time he was 10 until he reached 14, Kadwell led tours at the sanctuary and cared for birds at his family's home when the sanctuary's cages were too full.

All of that experience prepared Kadwell for the incredibly demanding project he and his family were about to take on when they took in Joe the Crow.

"It's a very high-maintenance job. We've tried to nurse many birds back to health over the years, not always successfully."

But this time, with a lot of help from his nine-year-old son, Karl, the patient has thrived.

On a steady diet of worms, insects and a little baby pabulum when there are no bugs around, Joe the Crow has grown into an active, mischievous, healthy-looking bird.

During the early weeks, he had to be hand-fed nearly every 15 minutes during daylight hours, but has now cut back to feedings every half hour.

He's also begun to supplement the diet provided to him by the Kadwells with insects of his own when he's outside.

Joe the Crow learned how to fly about a week ago, but chooses not to go too far from the only home he's known. He spends most of his time inside the house, in a pen that was built for him in the garage or poking around in the yard.

On Friday night, he spent his first night sleeping outside the house in a tree in the yard. The night almost ended very badly for Joe the Crow.

At about 6 a.m. Saturday Kadwell awoke to a real ruckus of bird squawks and screeches. He went outside to find young Joe surrounded by adult ravens and other birds which often prey upon the young of others.

"I suspected it might happen, so I called him in for breakfast and he came out of the tree."

Joe the Crow will eventually fly off for good, the Kadwells know. But it's impossible to tell when that might be.

"Because crows are intelligent and like human contact, their transition to the wild can take a little longer," said Mr. Kadwell.

On top of being very smart, crows are related to minna birds and can learn to mimic human speech.

Joe the Crow has demonstrated he's no bird brain when it comes to talking. The youngster is already learning to say "Hello" and "Hi."

One of these days, the Kadwells will have to learn to say goodbye to their fine, feathered friend.

Joe the crow has made himself right at home at the Kadwells', and has had no problems accepting the Haliburton humans as his new family. Above, he perches on Karl Kadwell's head to get a better view of the world. At right, Codie Clark and Shawn Kadwell watch as Kris Kadwell feeds Joe some pabulum. Luckily, the every-15-minute-feedings can now be done on the half hour. The elder Kadwell has a lot of experience taking care of birds, having worked at the Winding Lane Bird Sanctuary when he was a teenager.

Development plan should be ready in a month, Woodland Ranch says

The politicians argued Darroch and his partners have broken the county's recently adopted tree-cutting bylaw, which sets out regulations for logging on privately owned land.

They gave Darroch an ultimatum to submit plans to the municipality soon or face possible logging sanctions.

Darroch said he'll be back in the county in about a month and will have a plan in place to show the municipality. He also said he's hired Price Waterhouse in Toronto to conduct a marketing feasibility study for the development proposal.

"Now we're getting all our recommendations from our experts to put something more formal together. It's only been a week since I've been out there."

Preliminary plans call for RV facilities to be built for between 2,000 and 3,000 families over a 10-year period.

The ranch would also offer horseback riding, cattle drives, hiking, biking and other recreational activities.

Plans for the two golf courses are on hold, pending the outcome of an environmental hearing into the ranch's application to irrigate the courses with water from Little Soyers Lake.

The Soyers Lake Ratepayers Association has appealed an Environment Ministry decision, giving the ranch permission to draw up to 2.72 million litres of water per day from the lake from spring until fall. The hearing will be held in Dysart's council chambers June 28-29.

Darroch said he's been slow to assemble a formal development proposal because he's unfamiliar with the planning process in Ontario.

"Things are different out there than they are in B.C. It's been a real learning curve for me."

Darroch said he's "done a lot of developments out west," including a couple of RV parks.

The ranch's ownership group is about to undergo a "complete restructure," said Darroch. "There will be a couple of new players involved."

SPRING CLEANING:

Coalition launches environmental appeal of continued use of Dombind

Naturalists, cottagers and several residents of eastern Ontario are seeking to appeal an order of the Ontario Ministry of the Environment that permits the Norampac Inc. cardboard mill in Trenton to continue the use of its waste as the dust suppressant known as Dombind.

The Sierra Legal Defence Fund has filed the application to the Environmental Appeal Board on behalf of the Federation of Ontario Naturalists, the Federation of Ontario Cottagers' Associations, Quinte Watershed Cleanup and seven residents of Hastings and Prince Edward Counties.

The order, issued to Norampac Inc. on April 29, was supposed to impose strict controls of the composition and use of Dombind during the two-year period during which the company was to develop alternative means of handling this waste. But not only does the order fail to end the use of Dombind within two years, opponents say, it is also silent on the allowable limits of the many toxic compounds known to be in it.

Among the grounds for the appeal set out in the 40-page application are that:

- The order fails to set any limit on the dioxin content of Dombind.

- The order allows the use of Dombind without a certificate of approval from the MOE - permission that is beyond the authority of ministry staff.

- The order fails to ensure proper training of the people applying Dombind, and adequate enforcement of application guidelines.

"If the minister really wants Dombind off the roads, he is going to have to give clear instructions to the company," said Ric Symmes, executive director of the Federation of Ontario Naturalists.

The Ministry of the Environment has ten days to respond to the application and the Environmental Appeal Board can issue a decision in as few as 30 days.

If the appeal is permitted, the applicants will have an opportunity to appear before the board to explain exactly how the order should be changed and why.

While recognizing the need for dust suppressants for unpaved roads in Ontario, the applicants say they will stress that there are alternatives to Dombind that have far fewer environmental and health impacts.

Spirit of VSS lives on at new school

■ Parents, school officials mark opening of Stuart Baker School

PETER DOWNS

Staff Reporter

Though its aging bricks and mortar have been abandoned, the rich spirit that made Victoria Street School so unique remains alive at Haliburton's new primary school, its principal says.

"It's the spirit of the people who live and work here who make the school such a special place," Debbie Wales told the audience at Saturday's official opening ceremony for Stuart W. Baker Elementary School. "... The spirit of Victoria Street School continues to live here."

More than 100 people, mainly parents, children and staff from area schools, attended the opening and took the opportunity to tour the building that has replaced VSS.

Students from the 75-year-old school began classes at their new school in April.

Others involved in the opening ceremony included the late Stuart Baker's wife, Dorothy Baker, riding MPP Chris Hodgson, board director Evelyn Brown, board chair Cheryl Murdoch, superintendent of schools Dale Robinson and Brad Saunders, the now retired director of the former Haliburton County school board.

Wales credited the hard work and determination of a handful of vocal parents for persuading the county's former school board to build a new school, rather than renovating VSS or building an addition at J. Douglas Hodgson Elementary School to replace it.

She also thanked trustees and administrators with the former board, particularly Dale Robinson and Brad Saunders, for "putting students first" and listening to the parents.

Wales reserved special thanks for riding MPP Chris Hodgson, who she said was instrumental in convincing the Education Ministry to approve construction

A PROUD MOMENT:

Dorothy Baker, centre, cuts the ribbon to officially open the Haliburton primary school named in the memory of her late husband and long-time educator, Stuart Baker. of the school.

"Without his support for this project, it's doubtful we would be standing here today."

Board director Evelyn Brown also praised Hodgson not only for helping see that the school was built, but also for helping the board wade through other difficult education issues at Queen's Park.

Hodgson said the school couldn't have been built without the support of many people.

"Most important for me is the fact that we have excellent facilities here in our county to help our children become the best they can be," he said.

Hodgson and other speakers expressed how pleased they are that the school has been named after Stuart Baker, an educator who spent his entire career in the Highlands as a teacher, principal and finally as director of the board.

"Stuart Baker, to me, was the epitome of what kids and education are all about," said board chair Cheryl Murdoch. "He lived it, he breathed it and he was a great inspiration for us all."

Dale Robinson credited former Haliburton school trustees for their foresight in purchasing the 100-acre parcel of land that now houses the new primary school, JDHES, the high school and the board's satellite office.

"At the time it was thought by some that it was pretty extravagant to have a piece of property this size," he told the crowd.

Robinson wished the best for all the young students who'll begin their educations at Stuart Baker School.

"May the children who pass through this door have a first-rate education. We're going to work hard to see that that happens."

Health board gets accustomed to the word "surplus"

■ Infusion of provincial funding means HHHS will have its first balanced budget

PETER DOWNS

Staff Reporter

The following are brief reports of items discussed at Thursday's meeting of the Haliburton Highlands Health Services board.

As they looked over the board's year-end financial position, members of the finance committee found themselves grappling with an unfamiliar word — surplus.

Each year since its formation a few years ago, the board has seen itself end up a little deeper in the hole.

But a recent financial boost from the Ministry of Health meant the board finished the fiscal year ending March 31 about $79,000 in the black.

"We all had trouble saying the word surplus this year," said finance committee chair Ted Wilkes.

Without $223,000 in additional funding from Queen's Park, the board would have ended the year with a deficit of about $114,000.

Balanced budget

Finance committee members have set out a budget for the year ahead aimed to keep the board out of the red.

The balanced budget includes an additional $241,000 in provincial funding.

But despite the extra operating money, the committee had to trim about $66,000 from proposed spending to stay out of the red, Wilkes told board members.

"That leaves us no money for data processing and we require it," he said.

The budget will allow the board to add a part-time RPN at Haliburton's hospital and increase staffing in the physiotherapy department to the equivalent of two full-time positions, said HHHS executive director Foster Loucks.

Up to $110,000 has also been budgeted to cover wage increase as the board renegotiates contracts with three employee groups.

The board approved the budget in principle. After it receives final approval it will be sent to the Ministry of Health as part of an operating plan for the year ahead.

Final regular meeting

Hugh Nichol, whose term as chairman of the board comes to a close at the AGM, thanked his colleagues for their support.

Nichol served three consecutive one-year terms at the head of the table while the board worked to get the capital projects off the board.

"I feel as a board that we've accomplished a lot over the past three years," he said.

Board members gave Nichol a round of applause as his final regular meeting as board chair drew to a close.

David Coulson has put his name forward to stand in the election of a new chair. The election of executive officers will be held at the AGM.

AGM

All those who are members in the Haliburton Highlands Health Services Corporation are invited to attend its Annual General Meeting on Thursday, June 24 at 7 p.m. at Our Lady of Fatima Catholic Church.

TD BANK BOOSTS HEALTHCARE CAPITAL CAMPAIGN:

The Haliburton Highlands Health Services Foundation has received a big boost from the Toronto Dominion Bank, which has pledged to donate $5,000 annually over the next five years for a total corporate donation of $25,000. Last week the TD's Minden branch manager Joanne Camelon made the first presentation to Foundation chair Dale Walker, capital campaign vice-chair Dave Gray, chair Don Popple and Foundation board member Jack Brezina (far left). Also taking part are bank employees, from left: Carol Johnson, Tom Burnside, Barbara Cameron, Winona Wray, Stephanie Crowe, Laurie Watson, Michelle Davis and Martha Waind.

Complacency among Tory supporters among Hodgson campaign's biggest concerns ing's eligible voters went to the polls, the results show Hodgson has a stable foundation of support across the riding, even in the areas new to the riding.

(Boundaries were recently changed to match those of federal ridings. This was the first time people in places such as Millbrook to the south and Brock to the west had the opportunity to vote for or against Hodgson. The increase in the number of voters also explains why even though he garnered 7,000 more votes than in the previous election, his plurality dropped by five percent.)

"What I sensed right from the beginning was that there was a groundswell for Chris," says his campaign manager, Harold Brown. "There are lots of people who are Chris Hodgson people. When you look at the votes coming in, he's running ahead of the party and that's a great testimony for him."

"Twenty-six percent of the riding is brand new and we're winning every poll. That says something about his popularity and standing," Brown says as fellow campaign workers watched the television coverage of the results, cheering every time Hodgson's victory was announced.

In fact, his popularity was of concern to the campaign team. One of their biggest fears was complacency — would Hodgson supporters not bother to vote if they thought he'd win anyway? How would he then fare against those who strongly opposed the Tory government and would be very sure to show their displeasure on the ballot?

Election day was therefore a very busy one for campaign workers. "We worked really hard to get the vote out," says Ted Brandon, who volunteered with the campaign.

However, as the polls started to come in, it soon became clear either they needn't have worried or their efforts paid off. When Hodgson and his wife Marie walked into the hall shortly after nine, to the applause of the 100 or so people present, emcee Lorne Chester said "the CBC declared you a winner 20 minutes ago. We and I'm pleased to see the results."

Later that evening, his mother Barb was asked why she thought her son had received such a high level of support.

"He's honest and he works hard for everybody," she said.

"One thing I find is he listens to people and he doesn't talk off the top of his head to get him in a lot of trouble. I don't think he's a person who will forget his roots, either."

Shortly after 10, Hodgson was at the far end of the room when he got the message that Sharon McCrae had arrived. Although he immediately made an effort to go to the other end of the room to see her, she had already left, without speaking to him.

When Denyer arrived, however, the NDP candidate joined Hodgson at the microphone at the centre of the room. "Congratulations on a job well done," Denyer told him, noting that there had been no personal attacks during the local campaigning. "You're a great guy — we're just a bit different in party politics."

"Can I get you a drink," Hodgson said after the two men had shaken hands. Denyer agreed and stayed for a few minutes.

The final vote tally was not known at press time. However, at midnight on Thursday, with 232 of the 241 polls counted, the vote was:

Brad Bradamore, independent: 329

Rick Denyer, NDP: 3,629

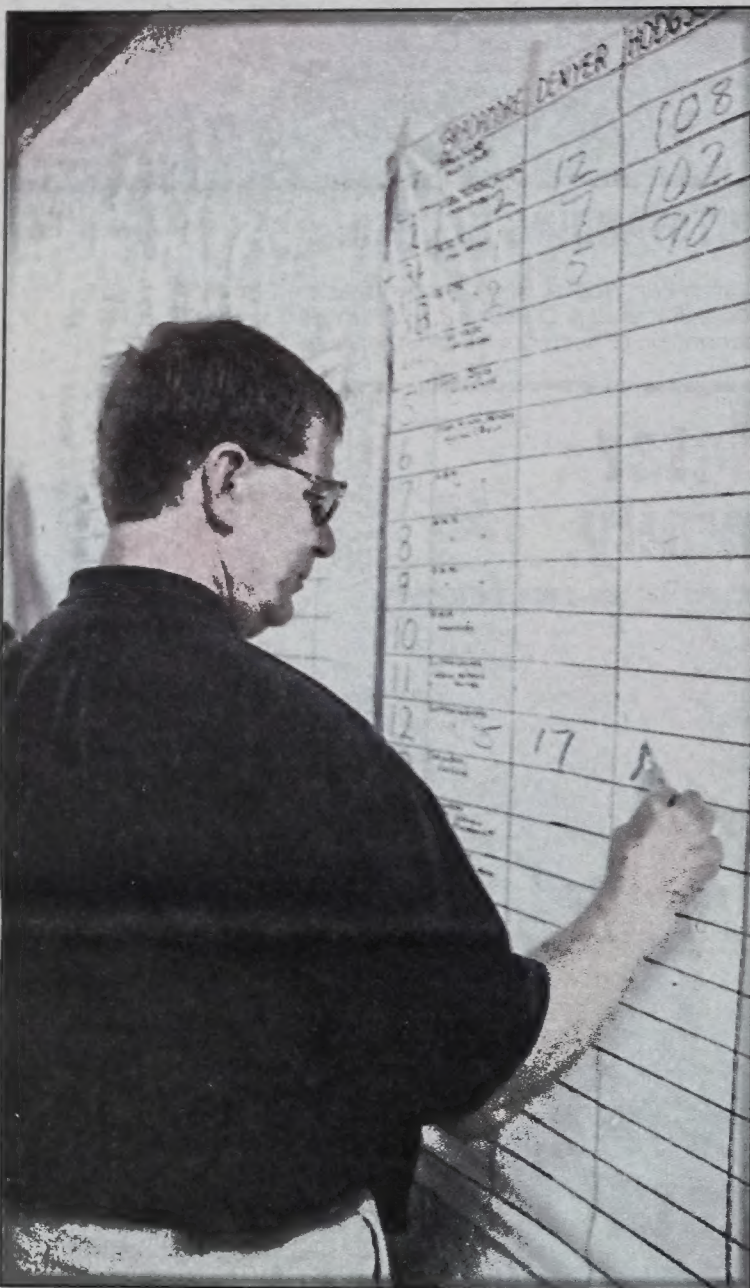

Chris Hodgson, PC: 31,175

Sharon McCrae, Liberal: 13,964

Maxim Newby, Natural Law Party: 152

Charles Olito, Freedom Party: 196

Ruth Ann Matthews of the Lindsay returning office says this riding experienced none of the problems which marred voting in other areas. More than 2,000 eligible voters who had not been registered were processed before election day.

POLL BY POLL:

Each poll result was announced to the crowd as Terry Franklin recorded the numbers on a wall chart. Hodgson won all but one poll in Snowdon and one in Lindsay.

CHEERING SECTION:

Campaign supporters cheered every time the CBC announced that Hodgson had handily won re-election but there was sadness when results revealed Tory MPPs losing their seats.

“Twenty-six percent of the riding is brand new and we're winning every poll. That says something about Chris's popularity and standing.”

Campaign manager HAROLD BROWN

declared you a winner one minute after 8 o'clock (when the polls closed.)"

Later, upon hearing that McCrae had won one poll, Chester said "we've got work to do — we've lost one poll."

Hodgson thanked his campaign staff and supporters for all the work they did to help ensure his re-election. Noting that this was the first time in 30 years that a government had been returned to power with a second majority, Hodgson said that ever since being elected in 1994, "my first priority is working hard."

He said "people see that we did what we said we'd do and will keep our priorities on the right track."

Province-wide, he credited his government with restoring balance. On a local level, he says that much has been achieved in this county, but it wasn't done as a way of "buying" votes. "We now have the healthcare facilities we should have had 15 years ago. Governments have been spending like crazy, but not in our area."

Commenting on the hospital and school construction, as well as such things as road improvements, Hodgson told The Echo "these are all things that are needed."

Asked if he was confident heading in to election day, Hodgson said "I'm always worried. You never know how you'll do. But we worked hard

Walk for Water taps into dedication of participants

DIANA ZLOMISLIC

Despite declining participant levels, Help A Village Effort's Walk for Water raised more than $10,000 on Saturday with the help of only 38 walkers.

"We have been having a little challenge in the last couple of years to get walkers out," says Toos Reid, one of the event's organizers. "It used to be 75-100 (walkers) but now the average is between 20 and 30. Fortunately though, the money's still the same."

Many of the walkers and volunteers who did show up this year have been footing the cause since it began in 1982.

Eagle Lake residents Carl and Marie Wallace embarked on their sixteenth walk this year.

"The only one we missed was the first one," says Marie.

While they opted for the 5km route rather than the 16 km trek to Wigamog this year, the couple have walked as far as 33 km when the walk was held in Wilberforce. And that distance included the daunting climb up the hamlet's infamous Vinegar Hill. The grade is steep enough that a road sign warns vehicles to shift gears on the way down.

Though Paimie Yip and her husband Stephen haven't been able to make it to as many of the walks in Haliburton as the Wallaces, they have been integral to HAVE's environmental awareness project in the Gambia.

In Canada for only six weeks, Paimie and Stephen drove into the Highlands from Ottawa the morning of the walk.

"We shall be bravely trying to do a 16 km walk today," says Paimie.

When the Yips return to the Gambia in July, it will be to oversee two of HAVE's pilot projects there. Using part of the money raised from the event and funding from the Canadian International Development Agency, Paimie's role will be to direct an agricultural project at the schools that will teach the children about the environment and nutrition. They've already installed Saskatchewan-made windpumps at the schools to replace labour-intensive hand-pumps.

HAVE will also be drilling wells in India, with the matching funds from CIDA.

Ish Lal, a native of India, now living in Lindsay, has been overseeing the project there.

Lal says some wells, which must be drilled in remote areas, have to be dug by hand since they cannot get the trucks of machinery across the rivers and rough terrain. All of the wells, hand and machine dug, are drilled 200 feet into the ground so the well can perform under extreme conditions for at least 10 years, he added.

Twenty-three wells will be drilled this year. Next year, HAVE plans to dig between 12 and 20 more, says committee member Ron Reid. In the Gambia, they hope to expand environmental awareness into five new primary schools.

Considering these big plans,

Toos Reid says she hopes to attract more families to the event next year.

And if they need a reason to get involved, listen to Art Van Der Grient, of Kennisis Lake on why he supports the walk.

"We help people get clear, beautiful water that they can't get and we have in abundance. It's a duty for all of us to help them out as much as we can. Maybe we can do more but at least we do this."

Quiet election, quiet results

LAST WEEK'S EDITORIAL MENTIONED HOW quiet the provincial election campaign had been in the Highlands. Well, if the campaign was a non-event, Chris Hodgson's re-election certainly created no ripples of conversation either. On Friday, you could hardly tell there had been an election the previous day. No one was really talking about Hodgson's win, perhaps because it was such a foregone conclusion in people's minds. No surprise, hence no buzz of excitement.

It's always a bit disconcerting to read urban newspapers' take on the election results. City writers tend to dismiss their rural and suburban neighbours as this massive block of unsophisticated, untroubled, social conservatives who just don't understand issues the way city folk do. Somehow they make it seem people in the country don't have to tackle problems such as poverty, pollution, mental illness, child abuse and joblessness, because if they did, they certainly wouldn't be voting for the Tory government.

It should be said that the only difference between urban and rural residents is that in the city, the people who are poor, or jobless, or affected by the smog are part of this one, large mass of humanity. In a small town, you know the people, and their troubles, by name. We are certainly not immune to the social and economic strife which affects people in the city, and fully expect governments to help do something about it. There are just differences of opinion about how we as a society should be tackling those problems.

Hodgson's success at getting 63% of the people to vote for a party which has often been villified in the media is indeed a testament to his record as the riding's MPP. He has been effective, working hard for all his constituents, whether they support his party's policies or not. Some call it vote buying, but the projects which Hodgson has steered through the maze of government bureaucracy are truly justified. This county needed better healthcare facilities. Our schools needed to be brought up to date. People needed safe and smooth roads to get to the Highlands. There has been no waste of government money; it's just nice that some of that government money is being spent in the Highlands, and Hodgson ensured that it was.

This isn't to say the Conservatives have universal support. Many people have legitimate problems with some of the government's policies and speak out against them, as they should. (That said, the old saying about honey working better than vinegar is also true. How you speak out is often as important as what you say.) However, more people tend to think that overall, the government is moving in the right direction, albeit with a few bumps and tight turns along the way.

In the next four years, it is all constituents' duty to let Hodgson know what they like and don't like about the government's actions. Complacency isn't good for anyone, and it's certainly not healthy in a democratic society. A vote is not a blank cheque, telling politicians they can fill in what they want until the next election is called.

Condoms don't always make sex safe

To the Editor:

I am writing out of concern about a plan to implement a sexual health clinic in the Haliburton Highlands Secondary School and install condom machines in the washrooms. While the health clinic may better equip students to make informed choices about premarital sex, I very much doubt the condom machines will.

Condoms are surrounded by a myth, that if you simply use them you are having "safe sex". The saddest thing about this is that it is a total lie.

- Dr. Susan Weller of the University of Texas (Social Science and Medicine, Vol. 36, No. 36, June 1993) found that in 11 different studies of condom efficiency in actual use, the condoms had an average failure rate of 31% in protecting against HIV; condoms have an annual contraceptive failure rate of 18.4% for girls under 18.

- Dr. Ken Noller, Past Chairman of the American College of Obstetrics and Gynecology Committee explains that several studies show condoms do not protect against the human papilloma virus (HPV) which causes 90% of all cervical cancer cases; many sexually transmitted diseases (STDs) can be transmitted from the adjacent area not covered by a condom (OB/GYN Clinical Alert, September 1992).

- Except for the common flu, STDs are now the most common disease in North America; 85% of all STDs are found in people 25 years or younger. A report from The World Health Organization estimates that 5,000 people become infected with HIV every day. In one lab study no fewer than 29 or 89 condoms leaked HIV-sized particles in sufficient quantities to cause infection. Since 1989, the numbers of 13 to 24-year-olds with AIDS has increased 77%. Chlamydia, another STD, is the major cause of tubal infertility.

In the two decades since the US government sponsored comprehensive sex education, there has been a 60% increase in births outside of marriage. In light of all this information, perhaps we might want to look at educational programs that have actually worked to reduce teen pregnancy. Both "Sex Respect" and "Best Friends" are abstinence-based curricula which, when implemented, have reduced pregnancy amongst youth who came to believe that it is important not to have sex before marriage.

The Centre for Disease Control released an abstinence program, a just-say-no program, claiming "evidence suggests that school health programs can be effective means of preventing...smoking." If it will work for tobacco, why not for sexual activity?

In my work as Director of The Pregnancy Care Centre in Metro Toronto, I found in counselling hundreds of adolescents over a 10-year period that most female youth are not enjoying their sexual relationship and they often feel coerced. They are looking for support and encouragement to just-say-no.

As I look at the evidence, I see that women are the big losers all round. And if pregnancy results from a failed condom, she is most often abandoned by the father of their baby, who then leaves her alone to face more terrible choices...to abort, to parent, or place for adoption the child of their "love". Any of these choices are difficult, but the scars left by abortion can be lifelong (to say nothing about the taking of a young one's life).

If health...emotional, social, physical and mental...is what we care about for the youth of Haliburton, then why not invest in abstinence programs which have a proven track record? The rest don't work. Do we care enough to do what works or will we continue to perpetuate a lie? Our kids deserve better!

How to win friends and mimic people

perspectives

THE AUTHOR OF A BOOK titled How to Make Someone Like You in 90 Seconds, (title perhaps paraphrased), was interviewed on CBC Radio's Fresh Air recently. His analysis showed him that when we first meet others, we like them if they seem to be like ourselves. This forms the basis of his book.

He suggests that when meeting someone new, each of us mirror their actions. For example, if that person is sitting up straight and with legs crossed, we should do the same. Perhaps the seriousness of his message escaped me but the image that presented itself to me, a former university lecturer, was of a room full of students who had read his book, eager to impress because they wanted good marks, all aping me in my gestures, expression, and posture. Ludicrous.

This idea is just another in the long list of suggestions frequently made into self-help books that purport to tell each of us "how to win friends and influence people." Originally, back forty years ago or so when the book by that name was published, there was a sincere effort to help people communicate more successfully with others.

But the powers that be took those ideas, dreamed up more, and since have fed the unsuspecting public with an ever increasing stream of "how to" secrets - how to get the customer to buy more, how to make a good impression on an interviewer, how to write an eye-catching resume, how to attract a member of the opposite sex, and so on and so on.

One thing above all gradually defeats each of these secrets to success - lack of sincerity. When something becomes a formula it loses its meaning, but on the way we have lost another genuine way to communicate with each other.

Take the phrase "Have a good day," introduced by the Safeway grocery chain I think in the early 1980s. For awhile we found it intrusive, for the clerk speaking did not know us, could not possibly care for each and every customer coming through the line, yet was ordered by the employers to say it and make it sound sincere. Gradually the term and its heartfelt sentiment lost all meaning.

Far more serious interactions such as getting a job are having the same problem. Since most everyone now knows how to dress, how to have the proper demeanor, how to be properly deferential, how to create an eye-catching resume, the interviewer must seek other ways to find the best person for the job.

Take references, for example. Several years ago I applied for a job in my field sending the required references, etc. During the long conversation, when the interviewer acknowledged that I had the needed qualifications, I sensed a strong reserve. So I asked what was wrong. (I know that's not a good tactic.) But the interviewer was honest and told me that my references troubled her because all were highly reputed academicians and I but a lowly lecturer. I explained. One was a personal friend, one was my mentor, and one had been a colleague for a short time. I had to really talk and talk to convince her that my references were genuine.

Then she told me that many applicants use fake references in order to stand out, for the gurus have said it is essential to do whatever it takes to get to the interview. They hope that the interviewer does not have time to check, the odds being in the applicant's favour. Thus over time references have become suspect with the result that they have lost their meaning - just like "Have a good day."

So, being the insecure populace we are, we now will rush on to the next secret. If this latest book sells we will all learn to ape each other on meeting. Who knows what other absurd dictums will be presented to help us con our fellow human beings.

Let's hope that the gurus never find a way to formalize sincerity, but that's an oxymoron because if it is programmed it loses its genuine spontaneity and thus no longer could it be termed "sincere."

Bigotry, not gay parents puts kids at risk

To the Editor:

I am writing in response to Lyn Unsworth's letter last week decrying the Supreme Court decision to remove the opposite sex restriction from the definition of spouse.

I imagine that the fears expressed in this letter come from a deep compassion for children and their safety. The beliefs on which they seem to be based, however, are unfounded and potentially destructive, while being fairly common, and as such, cannot go unchallenged.

Unsworth is concerned that for a child to grow up without a mother or father puts that child at risk (although exactly what the child is supposed to be at risk of is not specified). In fact, lots of very healthy children are raised by single parents - with support, of course, we all need that. And lots of healthy children have a parent or parents who are gay or lesbian. The greatest "risk" for these children is the effects of bigotry.

Children benefit from experiencing loving adult relationships, regardless of the gender of the adult involved. Most children who live with a parent and step parent of the same gender, also have access to the other birth parent and/or other adults. Researchers consistently discover that children of gay or lesbian parents are well adjusted, and are no more or less likely to be gay or lesbian themselves than children raised in heterosexual households. They are at less risk for sexual abuse in the home since, statistically, sexual abusers of boys or girls are most frequently heterosexual males. Those children who later discover themselves to be gay or lesbian (perhaps one in 20 in the population) are best served by a community which can embrace them with love and acceptance, rather than fear and rejection.

Healthy communities are made up of healthy people in all their rich diversity - people who put their energy into learning about and understanding each other, and working toward common goals. Children and families face enough challenges in the world as it is, without having to contend with prejudicial misconceptions from others.

Helpers made bad experience better

To the Editor:

I would like to take this opportunity to express my appreciation for the prompt response and care given to my wife, myself and others involved in a recent road accident at Gooderham.

The Glamorgan fire chief was there almost immediately, ready for action and a safety check was carried out on the vehicles.

In particular, I would commend Jeff Schultz, paramedic, for his efficiency, care and kindness. He took control of the medical situation and arranged for our transportation to the hospital in Haliburton.

On my way to the hospital I chatted to the paramedic driving the ambulance, who offered me sincere and helpful advice on how to deal with the after effects of the accident. On reaching the hospital, we were looked after by a friendly and efficient hospital staff.

This was a bad experience lightened by the warmth of the local people.

Sexual health clinic plan raises tough questions

To the Editor:

Last week's article concerning the Family Medical Centre running a sexual health clinic at Haliburton Highlands Secondary School has sparked a fury of questions and opinions. In an attempt to help our kids to "have easier access to birth control and be better equipped to make informed choices about premarital sex," it is important to note that there has not been any opportunity given to parents of high school students to voice their opinion on this issue. A council of a few parents, community representatives, and students along with their principal has just put forth a proposal to the Trillium Lakelands School Board for a sexual health clinic to promote safe sex protected by a doctor/patient confidentiality code for the sake of saving sons or daughters from a potentially embarrassing conversation with their parents!

Some questions for you to ask as a parent regarding this issue:

1. The Ministry of Education under Policy/Program Memorandum 122 documents clearly under the title of "Roles and Responsibilities of the School Council", that the council will "communicate regularly with parents and other members of the community to seek their views and preferences with regard to matters being addressed by the council, and to report on the activities of the council to the school community." To my knowledge, this school council has not consulted or surveyed parents on this issue! This newspaper article is likely the first time any of us knew this proposal was made to the Trillium Lakelands District School Board. Why were parents not a part of this process?

2. Principal Gary Brohman was quoted as saying, "I'm definitely in favour of it (the clinic). I think anything we can do to help students learn about safe sex is important." At the beginning of the school year, members of the community invited and paid the expenses of Ms. Beverly Hadland of "Straight Talk Youth Counselling of Ontario to come and give her presentation on the realities of sexually transmitted diseases, the consequences of pre-marital sex, the emotional and physical scars resulting from abortions and the promotion of practising abstinence. The high school was approached months in advance to allow Ms. Hadland to give her presentation to the students and their parents. If Gary Brohman is concerned about this issue, why was Ms. Hadland not allowed to give her presentation to the students at the high school? She was well received by the Grade 7 and 8 students at J. D. Hodgson School with an additional evening presentation for parents to come along with their children.

3. Has the school council, principal and school board discussed at length the liability issues at hand? If a student contracts AIDS or any other STD after purchasing and using a condom from the dispenser at school, who claims responsibility for the fate of that student? The school? The clinic? The principal? The school board trustee? It seems that parents get the job of picking up the emotional pieces after their son or daughter has exhausted all the avenues of confidential counselling at the clinic where they may learn they have contracted an STD or suffering from post abortion depression. Would it not be better to promote an in-school program that would help develop communication skills between kids and their parents or promote the benefits of remaining chaste until marriage?

4. What kind of counselling are kids going to receive? There is a big difference between medical counselling, using terminology that will describe the aspects of a procedure or method and emotional counselling, supporting a student who is suffering the emotional scars of an abortion. Do they only give medical counselling to the girl who has just found out she is pregnant, or the boy who has just been infected with an STD? Is this clinic going to provide knowledge on how to say "no" to premarital sex, or does it just teach kids on how to deal with medical problems as a result of thinking with their hormones?

5. Students cannot receive an aspirin or Tylenol at the school office without a letter of permission from you the parent but girls will be able to receive a prescription for birth control pills and boys will be able to obtain a condom at the school and without parents knowing about it. As a parent, would you not want to know what methods of birth control or medications are being prescribed to your kids?

It takes a village to raise a child. If that child is embarrassed to buy condoms at the drug store for fear of what their neighbour will think, perhaps that's a good conscience saying "no" to premarital sex. They would not be embarrassed if they truly thought they were doing the right thing! The logical side of the brain shuts down when our kids are not counselled on how to handle their hormones.

I strongly urge parents to ask these questions of their school council, the principal, the medical centre and the school board surrounding this issue. In a society where we need to encourage an ongoing dialogue between ourselves and our kids, are you not concerned that this clinic will undermine or replace some of our opportunities to discuss these potentially life-changing decisions with your children?

Trimmed trees make busy road safer for kids walking to school

To the Editor:

Thank you very much!

We don't know your name, but you talked to my husband in front of our home, and to me at the end of our street, Meadowview Road. You are the county employee we talked to about having the trees trimmed or cut down on County Rd. #1.

It is now much safer for residents turning onto Meadowview Rd., and for our children who must walk along this dangerous section of County Road #1. There is heavy traffic before and after school and little or no shoulder to walk on.

However, when our children cross the highway, they can now see and be seen. Thank you whoever you are.

Laurie and Ross Burk,
Haliburton

Jumping with lots of heart

Despite the school's small size -- just 62 students -- Gooderham Elementary School raised $1,179 for the Heart and Stroke Foundation in last week's Jump for Heart. One student, Robin Heath, raised $300 in pledges. In the photo at far left are Jordan Lesich, Ashley MacDuff, Jordan Askew and Kelley Dobson. Skipping in the photo at right are Cheyenne Graham and Samantha Bryxi.

Exercise with caution when its humid

This week is bringing with it some humid weather so we need to drink lots of water and be very careful about what activities we are doing outside. If you have any breathing disorder or are a young child or older adult, you are probably better off not doing any activity outdoors. Stay cool and drink lots.

If you are going to go biking or walking, please be cautious and only do what your body can handle. If you find you cannot breathe, then you should discontinue the activity. If you have access to a pool or lake, swimming is the best exercise you can do in this weather and it will keep you cool.

So have fun and be careful. Make sure you wear a 15 sunscreen to

OPP nab break-in suspects partying at bonfire

Two break-in suspects were arrested by police in Stanhope last week as they enjoyed themselves at a bonfire surrounded by stolen property.

Officers with the Minden/Coboconk OPP detachment found the two Peterborough men among four cottages that had been broken into on Maple Lake.

Police were tipped off by an individual who became suspicious after hearing the sound of loud voices from the area.

When they arrived, police say they found the men in possession of stolen property from the cottages, including tents, sleeping bags, gasoline, tools and alcohol. Police also seized an unspecified quantity of cannabis resin.

The two men, 21 years old and 24 years old, have been charged with breaking into the cottages and possession of drugs.

The men are not being held in custody, but are to appear in Minden court on Aug. 4.

Marine officers have begun summer marine patrols on local lakes. Boaters are reminded that the boating regulations have some significant changes in the year of 1999. Copies of the new boating regulations can be obtained from your local detachment or some marinas.

On May 31, an employee of the Haliburton Subway franchise advised that they had parked their brown 1983 Pontiac Station Wagon on Highway #118 and Highway #121 at 6:50 p.m. At 1:30 a.m. the employee left work and found the vehicle gone.

The vehicle was later recovered on Burkes Road in Haliburton, at 3:30 a.m.

Programs and services for children and youth

An investment in the health of our children for today and tomorrow.

- In the 1999 Budget, the Government of Canada demonstrated its commitment to improve the health of pregnant women and their babies.
- The Canada Prenatal Nutrition Program already funds 280 community-based projects across Canada and in 400 First Nations and Inuit communities. The Program offers 20,000 pregnant women the support they need to give their babies a healthy start in life.
- Now with additional funding of $75 million over three years, more than 35,000 Canadian women whose health or whose baby's health is at risk will benefit from this investment in communities all across Canada.
- The new funding will make it possible to increase efforts to prevent Fetal Alcohol Syndrome, the leading cause of preventable birth defects in children.
- There are a lot of other ways to give our children a good start in life. For details about this and all of the other services for children, call for your free copy of the Guide to Federal Programs and Services for Children and Youth.

Blairhampton golfer hits hole in one

John Kerr has been golfing for most of his 68 years, but he had to wait until last Thursday to hit his first hole in one.

The retired doctor and his wife, Madge, who live on Mountain Lake, were on the second hole at Blairhampton Golf Course when the joyous occasion occurred. Using a 7-wood on the par three hole, his ball flew through the air and neatly landed in the hole.

"He was very happy," says Mrs. Kerr, who hopes to be the next one in the family to achieve such a milestone.

Get ready for a

Really BIG Show

IT'S GOING TO BE BIG. And it's going to be absolutely spec-tac-u-lar.

Haliburton County has never before seen the likes of what will be taking place on the stage of the new Northern Lights Performing Arts Pavilion on June 17, 18, 19 and 20.

Sure, it's seen glimpses of the various performances, but at no time in the county's history has so much talent congregated together at one time and location.

It's helps of course that this will be the first opportunity for local singers, dancers, actors and musicians to perform in a proper theatre – proper stage, proper lights and sound, proper seats for the audience. Even so, the director and producers of the show that will officially open the new performing arts centre are pulling together a production that will certainly live up to its "gala" billing.

For many reasons, the Northern Lights Overture will be a major social and cultural event in the Highlands, a perfect way to celebrate the achievements of the past and the promise of the future as we reach the end of one millennium and beginning of another.

Sound like too much hyperbole? Perhaps. But after dropping by one of the rehearsals, and listening to some of the performers talk about the excitement that's building, it's hard not to be caught up in the magic.

It's not just the chill of a spring night that gives you goosebumps in the basement of St. George's Anglican Church. Director Barrie Wood is putting the "cast" of the gala's opening number through their paces. There's a Broadway feel to the piece, which was written by a colleague of Wood's and choreographed by Wood for the gala.

Wood may be an Eagle Lake resident now, but he and his

See Gala page 18

The Northern Lights Overture will certainly live up to its "gala" name thanks in large part to the work of director Barrie Wood. Rehearsals for this showcase of Highlands talent have been underway for weeks. With his background in Broadway musicals, it's not surprising the show has a Broadway feel to it. Scenes from a recent rehearsal of the opening and closing numbers are, clockwise from above: John Postlethwaite watches as Wayne

Cooper takes to centre stage; 11-year-old Ashley Sharpe will be the first person to speak on the new stage; Rachel Regina and Maradyn Wood do a short ballet; and Wood listens as his wife, Lorelyn Morgan, directs the closing number, which will include more than 220 performers on the stage at once.

family are just back from an American production of Crazy for You, which he also starred in during its Toronto run. Before that, Wood sang and danced in Beauty and the Beast and Cats, and under his guidance, there's a very professional feel to what's taking shape for the stage. (The closing act is directed by his wife, Lorelyn Morgan, who's performed at Stratford and Shaw.)

"This is a theatre and I wanted to open it in a theatrical way," says Wood, who is using the producers' gift of artistic licence to come up with a show that will certainly amaze as well as entertain the audience.

He's not indulging in artistic hype when he notes that "no one here has ever done a show this big." In the show's final piece, the more than 220 performers taking part in the gala will gather together on stage. A feast for the eyes and ears, it will be a test of Wood's logistical organization. He's been part of a big cast before, but he's never had to direct one. The fact that this is a brand new theatre to everyone, including all the light, sound and production people, make his challenge even more heroic.

"We're trying to foresee the worst," he says, not quite confident they'll succeed,

With more than 20 performances throughout the evening highlighting past favourites, there's also a new twist – opening and closing acts from Broadway musicals specially chosen and choreographed by director Barrie Wood. These scenes from a recent rehearsal show Valerie Lennox and Kate Campbell, at right, as well as a larger ensemble shot. It's advised that people buy their tickets now as it's hoped all four shows will be sold out.

but not necessarily worried that they'll fail. "We have a large shoehorn descending from the sky" to get all the performers on stage at the end, he smiles.

When the committee which raised the funds for the new theatre, which saw the transformation of a gym at HHSS into the Highlands' first properly designed performing space, decided that such an accomplishment warranted a truly grand opening, they knew a professional director would be needed.

The only thing they told Wood when he was hired was that they wanted local performers in the show. Wood wanted to have "a broad a range as possible," and so he put out a call for submissions from anyone and everyone who has ever performed in the Highlands.

Most groups responded with enthusiasm, although some had to turn down the invitation because it required a commitment for all four days of performances, as well as a few days of technical rehearsal before that.

As a result, 20 groups, large and small, will be sharing highlights of past performances. There will be such things as a tip of the hat to Bill Gliddon's HHSS Glee Club, which put on several Gilbert and Sullivan productions, a swirl of the kilt when Highland dancers perform, the heavenly singing of the Messiah Choir, the pure strains of a brass quintet and highlights from favourite shows in the Highlands' past.

Although there will be no emcee to introduce each act – read your program, Wood advises – a small band of actors will appear four times during the evening, linking the past with the present and future. There will even be a Northern Lights Orchestra.

It is predicted that the gala will be sold out for each performance so it's not advised to wait until the night (or afternoon) you want to go to buy your ticket. Tickets are $25 each, which include refreshments before and after each show, and are available at Cranberry Cottage in Haliburton and Mondays at The Storeroom in Minden. Seats will be allotted by organizers. However, if you want to choose from the available seats, drop by Cranberry Cottage on Wednesdays or The Storeroom on Mondays, both from 12 to 4 p.m.

The night performances are June 17, 18 and 19, with a matinee on the 20th.

Men - dust off those tuxedos.

Women - take those long dresses out of the closet.

Everyone - get ready to have some fun at the opening performances of the new Northern Lights Performing Arts Pavilion.

On June 17, 18, 19 and 20, the performers won't be the only ones who sparkle at the Northern Lights Overture.

"It's all show and flash and theatre," says Caryl Moulton, one of the organizers of the gala, inviting people to get dressed in their finest and make a real night of it.

Knowing that the $25 ticket price is quite steep by Highlands standards, organizers are working hard to ensure that patrons get their money's worth. As gala director Barrie Wood says, "the organizers are going beyond the pale to make this a classy and special evening."

Although formal attire is not mandatory, it is being encouraged. Don't be surprised to see a limousine pull up in front of the doors of the new theatre either; Marty Grant will be very busy bringing people to the performance in his freshly painted limo.

The evening will start with a parade as the Silver Flutes march up the main street to the theatre. They will remain playing outside while the high school's flute band entertains in the lobby once the doors open at 7:15. The lobby is being decorated with memorabilia from shows past, organized by Jack Brezina.

At 7:40, there will be a short welcome from a dignitary. One speaker will be former director of education Brad Saunders, who suggested to local thespian Curtis Eastmure that the construction of a new triple gym at HHSS would be the ideal time to transform one of the old gyms into a proper theatre with tiered seats. It's also hoped Chris Hodgson can attend one of the performances now that he's assured he is still the riding's MPP.

Each evening will include the unveiling of the plaque which shows off the theatre's logo as well as a list of the businesses and individuals who donated $5,000 each to the project.

After people are ushered to their seats by a well-rehearsed team of volunteers, the curtains will rise promptly, it's hoped at 8 p.m. (at 2 p.m. for the Sunday's matinee performance.)

During the intermission, people are invited to the new cafeteria next door to delight in some of the culinary samplings from Linda Beachli, Georges Henri Catering and Wigamog Inn. The taste treats are included in the ticket price.

"We're very excited," says Moulton, and judging from the amount of preparation for the evening, people who have tickets to a performance should be as well.

Director Barrie Wood, above, leading a rehearsal in the basement of St. George's Anglican Church recently, says the gala organizers are "going beyond the pale to make this a classy and special evening."

Everyone Welcome

Rain restores lake levels

The welcome rain returned last week and the lakes are responding in the Trent and Severn watersheds. The Haliburton lakes average 86.6% on Monday, May 31. This is about two per cent more than was stored on Tuesday, May 25. It also exceeds the average observed in the dry year of 1987 at this date and is approaching last year's level.

The rains have added a surplus to the Kawartha lakes that must be reduced now. Flow has been increased along the Otonabee River to discharge some of the surplus.

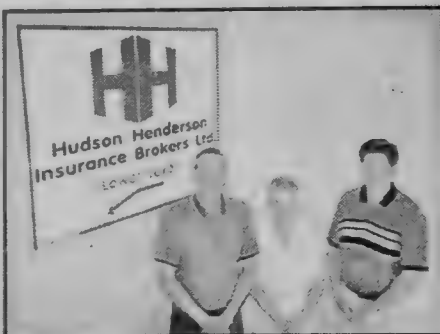

Lake Simcoe-Couchiching responded only slightly to the rains.

A recent low of 21 centimetres below full occurred on May 18. The lake rose to about 18 centimetres below normal by June 1.

The rains resulted in about 60 mm as a monthly total for the Kawartha area which is close to normal. This is the first month near normal since January.

Above, students react to the show, while at right actor Jim Giannarapis takes teacher Laura Scheffee onto the stage for a dance. The other actor in the play was Heidi Stepanek, whose grandmother Beatrice Herlihey, was the first principal at Wilberforce school. She was in the audience for the play.

Intriguing train mural recreates the old IB&O

■ Muralist Allen C. Hilgendorf's painting draws crowds at the firehall community news

wilberforce

Hilda Clark
448-2611

Two signs reserving spaces for handicapped people were installed near the main door of the Wilberforce Legion a few months ago. Donated by Len Crawford, they were installed by Bob Hayward. Then, they disappeared! Gone! Completely removed! Why? Surely, no one begrudges people who are in wheelchairs, use canes or walkers an easy access to the many activities that go on at the Legion.

If they were removed by thoughtless, carefree tricksters, maybe at closing time, perhaps they could make amends by openly returning them with an apology. Or even drop them off in the dark of the night!

If these signs are spotted in some unusual place, perhaps they could be retrieved and returned. They, after all, are not the kind of stolen sign one would be proud to display in one's den or room.

Now, for some good news. The painting of our mural on the Fire Hall wall has created much interest. Adults and children are dropping by to watch, to take pictures, and to chat with muralist, landscape artist Allen C. Hilgendorf as he creates a scene from our past.

Youngsters who can hardly believe a train once actually huffed and puffed up to a Wilberforce station twice a day, three times a week, are as intrigued by the picture immersing as the "older" folk who do remember the actual train, the IB&O, and its part in our history.

The mural will continue to be of interest for its content - people have so many train memories and associations. It will be a joy to have a piece of art out in the open, (in rain, sun or snow) for discussion and appreciation.

Representing Wilberforce Legion Branch 624, Ethel Scott and Scott Parker recently presented $3,000 to the Monmouth Volunteer Firemen toward the purchase of their ATV and for other equipment. A much appreciated donation from a generous organization.

Several members of the community attended the wedding of Kim Watson, daughter of Rev. David and Ann Watson, in Toronto last Saturday. Among those attending were Jan Barker, Pat and Lee Clarke, Ralph Watson, Mary and John Barker.

Intended for the previous week

The roast beef fundraising dinner, organized by the Wilberforce and Area Community Police Association, was a great success. The LWM C was a busy place Saturday with a hungry crowd of people relaxing over their meals. It was especially good for the many folks who had worked most of the day at their groups' yard sales. Appreciation is extended for the good meal and all their work to the Community Police volunteers.

The yard sales were plentiful on the weekend. Hope everyone found some treasures, or at least some useful items, and that the sellers managed to clear some unneeded stuff from their places.

Though summer weather has been with us for some time, and official summer is several weeks away, the Victoria Day holiday weekend has become the symbolic beginning of summertime. It is good to see the cottage folk back in the area, getting things opened up and put into shape. Businesses are extending their hours to include Sunday. The gardening business is booming.

It's good to see a new Rock (minerals) Shop in town. Since Joe and Verna Albett retired (again), closed the Dwyer Mine Shop, and moved into the village, there has been no local promotion of this important natural resource. Now there is again a shop where minerals have a central place, and with people to make them available in various forms - sets of rocks, single minerals, or as part of decorative and/or useful items. A good addition to the village.

■ Entries for both categories will be accepted until early August

In an effort to encourage further development of artistic skills the Buckhorn Wildlife Art Festival sponsors an Amateur Art Contest and an Amateur and Professional Carving Contest.

These two contests are one of the highlights of the festival. Each year orga-

Scam alert:

Area police offer tips so you can avoid being victimized

Sometime during mid-May, a Kinmount resident received a telephone call from a male party. The male advised her that she had won a cash prize of $50,000. He also stated that she could collect the prize by paying $1,000.

The resident declined even though the male party was very persistent. Several days later the male party called back and advised the resident that he had spoken to his boss. He then advised that the resident could collect the prize by paying only $750. The resident declined again.

The Minden/Coboconk Detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police would like to remind residents that telemarketing fraud and deceptive mail solicitation continues to surface in our community.

How to recognize a scam

1. It sounds too good to be true.
2. You must pay or you can't play. "You are a winner!" but you must send money to the caller in order to pay for delivery, taxes, processing, etc.
3. You must give them private financial information. The caller asks for confidential banking or credit card information.
4. Will that be cash or cash? Often criminal telemarketers ask you to send cash or a money order, rather than a cheque or credit card, as they have difficulty establishing themselves with legitimate credit card companies.
5. The caller is more excited than you - The caller wants to get you more excited about this "opportunity" so that you won't be able to think clearly.
6. It's the manager calling - The person calling claims to be a government official, tax officer, banking official, lawyer or some other person of authority.
7. The stranger calling wants to become your best friend.
8. It's A Limited Opportunity And You're Going To Miss Out.

If you have any concerns, please call Phone Busters at 1-800-348-5358 or

God saw you getting tired
When a cure was not to be
So He put His arms around you
And whispered "come to me".
Your golden heart stopped beating
Your gentle hands at rest
God broke our hearts to prove to us
He only takes the best.
In tears we saw you sinking
We watched you fade away
Our hearts were oh, so broken
You fought so hard to stay.
But when we saw you sleeping
So peacefully free from pain
We could not wish you back
To suffer all over again.

709 IN MEMORIAM

COOPER, LARRY - In loving memory of a loving son who passed away June 7, 1995.
Memories so wonderful of a son so
dear
Remembered always with a love sincere.
In our hearts the memories are kept Because we loved him too much to ever forget.
Dad and Mom.

709 IN MEMORIAM

COOPER, LARRY - In loving memory of my husband who passed away June 7, 1995.
I have only your memory, dear husband,
To remember my whole life through;
But the sweetness will linger forever
As I treasure the image of you.
Missed always, Holly.

HOLLAND, GEORGE - In loving memory of a dear father and husband who passed away June 5, 1985.
Two tired eyes are sleeping
Two willing hands are still
For one who suffered far too much
Is resting in God's will.
You never said goodbye to us
For perhaps it's just as well
We never could have said goodbye
To one we loved so well.
From his children Ruby, Edward,
Irvin, Hazel, Dale, Julia, Richard, Marilyn, Debora, Barry, and our families; and wife Elaine.
